In Fach of Three Cases of Overspeeding-Fines Go to the State, Not Town-Purchaser of Old Armory Warned -Anxiety for Man in Motor Boat.

In each of the three auto cases brought before the Third district court for overspeeding, Judge Williams has himposed fines of $100 and costs in each case, said to be the heaviest fines imposed for like offenses in any other court in the state. It is believed that the fine given in heavy doses will prove more effective, as it is understood that some touring automobilists find glory in being held up and fined $10 or $15. as it becomes a part of their touring record, but the $100 dose is not taken so cheerfully.

The town of Westerly in enforcing the automobile laws is not financially benefited, as no part of the fines reach the town treasury, but the town bears all the expense of arrest and prosecution. The special constables are paid from the town funds and so is the hire of the automobile that is used as a chaser by the officers in the automobile hunting same. It is a nove; method to trap the unwary, as the machines are run close together and the speedemoter tePs the tale.
